Answer Hint

Constitutional morality, social democracy, liberty, equality, fraternity, fundamental rights, affirmative action, rule of law, social justice, inclusive representation

Model Answer

Dr. B.R. Ambedkar viewed democracy as more than a system of periodic elections. His constitutional vision sought to establish a society based on liberty, equality, fraternity and social justice.

Major dimensions of his constitutional vision

1. Political equality: Universal adult franchise provides equal voting rights irrespective of caste, religion, gender or economic status.
2. Social justice: Constitutional safeguards and affirmative action seek to address historical discrimination and social exclusion.
3. Constitutional morality: Respect for constitutional values, institutional procedures and democratic conventions is essential for responsible governance.
4. Rule of law: Equality before law and judicial remedies protect citizens against arbitrary State action.

5. Inclusive representation: Constitutional provisions for historically disadvantaged communities promote their participation in democratic institutions.
6. Social democracy: Ambedkar emphasised that political democracy must be supported by social and economic equality.

Contemporary relevance

Persistent caste discrimination, gender inequality, economic disparities and unequal access to opportunities demonstrate the continuing importance of Ambedkar's ideas. Strengthening constitutional institutions, civic participation and social inclusion remains essential.

Conclusion

Ambedkar's constitutional philosophy provides a lasting framework for transforming political democracy into an inclusive social democracy. Its effective implementation is crucial for strengthening India's constitutional democracy.
